121 total picks and 22 selections from the 2009 Major League draft were trained by Balls-n-Strikes instructors. Ryan Howard, former student of Balls-n-Strikes instructors, was the 2005 National League Rookie of the Year and 2006 National League MVP. This is the largest program for high school baseball players in the Midwest.

The major objective of our high school program is to prepare athletes to perform at their highest level possible during the high school season when college coaches and recruiters are scouting. Our RVP Video Analyst System is used throughout the program to fine-tune the mechanics of every player. Our certified staff of instructors will teach college prep techniques/mechanics while building more confidence and improving your mental approach to the game.

Limited space available. Spots are reserved in the order they are received.
